California Winter Storms

As the recent storms move east and out of California, a dry, cold air mass will settle over tonight and last through Monday morning. Overnight temperatures will be very cold, but aren't expected to break any records. Saturday morning is expected to be the coldest although the rest of the overnight temperatures through the weekend will only be a few degrees warmer. Southern California will experience strong winds in the mountains, deserts, and coastal areas. Winds will gradually diminish tonight.

- An Incident has been created in Cal EOC for this event: 2016 December Statewide Storms

Significant Watches/Warnings

Despite the storms moving out of California, many flood warnings remain in effect due to the recent rain's impact to local river systems.

Flood Warnings remain in effect for 5 counties in California:

- Counties are: Butte, Glenn, Humboldt, Napa, Tehama

Flash Flood Watches remain in effect this morning for Southern California burn scar areas

State/Federal Agencies

- The Department of Water Resources Flood Operations Center (FOC) will remain on regular staffing patterns utilizing duty officer notifications after hours.
- The California Nevada River Forecast Center (CNRFC) will continue 24 hour staffing until tomorrow in response to the storms.
- American Red Cross (ARC) are working with local partners to assist counties when shelters or sandbag operations are needed.
  - Three possible shelter locations identified in the Lake Isabella area, Kern County.
  - Primary shelters have been identified and equipment staged in the Sand Fire and Fish Fire burn areas in Los Angeles County.
  - Shelter Teams are currently being alerted, formed and placed in an enhanced readiness posture.

Activations

- There are currently no Emergency Operations Centers (EOC) activated.

SITUATION SUMMARY

California Winter Storms (Continued)

County Preparatory Activities (Kern County):

- Kern County remains prepared to respond to post-storm needs.
- Will issue a Ready Kern (reverse 911) message to residents if needed.
- At this time Kern County will not be activating their EOC.

Missions

- Los Angeles County: LA County OEM has requested the use of 3 California National Guard (CNG) Armories for the homeless.
  - Pomona Armory – 600 S. Park Avenue, Pomona
  - West Los Angeles Armory – 1300 Federal Avenue, Los Angeles
  - Sylmar Armory – 12860 Arroyo Street (Foothill Blvd.), Sylmar
- Mission Tasking #2016-Southern-28876.

Infrastructure

- Utilities are in storm preparation mode and have pre-activated their storm response centers with core staffing.
- Utility outage websites indicate that there are no major power outages in the state.
- In Santa Cruz County PG&E has set up a micro base camp at Sky Park in Scotts Valley with equipment and staff to be ready if needed.

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Cold near freezing temperatures for portions of Central and Southern California.
- High winds expected for Southern California today.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www\_bc\_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A few light showers will still be possible in the mountains today, with snow levels near 2500-4000 feet. The general pattern for the region is for drier weather with a gradual warming trend until Tuesday. At the surface a Northwest-Northeast wind pattern will develop and provide some additional drying in wind-prone areas from the western Sierra slopes to the coastal range. The peak gusts will reach 25-30 mph Saturday and Sunday mornings. In some low spots, however, strong inversions will develop and conditions will remain cool and stable with diminishing air quality. Patchy fog will be common in these areas as well. By Tuesday afternoon the next weak Pacific frontal system will reach far Northwest California with light to moderate rain. The system will quickly sweep across the northern end of the region with light precipitation Tuesday night. Snow levels will be 4000-5000 feet. Another system will arrive early Thursday with heavier precipitation.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Most of the heavy rain associated with the current storm has moved south and east of the area early this morning. However, scattered showers can be expected to continue through the day, especially along the north slopes of the Angeles and San Bernardino Nation Forests, as well as the Kern County Mountains. Rainfall totals over the last 24 hours range from 2-4 inches along the central coast, 3-5" in the Sierras below 8,000 feet and 2-3" across south-facing slopes in the region. Local amounts of over 7" of rain fell in the Sierra Foothills, with over 5" in a few coastal areas of Monterey County. Additional rainfall today will be under a quarter of an inch over most areas. Colder air will filter into the area which will cause the snow level to fall steadily through the day. By this afternoon, snow may fall as low as 5,000 feet before falling briefly to 3,000 feet tonight. Most of the precipitation will have ended after this evening, but few north-slope snow showers may impede travel over the Grapevine and Cajon Pass. Winds will quickly turn to the north today, increasing to 20-30 mph with gusts to 50 mph across the desert. Expect winds to slowly weaken Saturday. This weekend, sunny and drier weather will return as high pressure builds along the coast. Light northeast winds of 10-20 mph can be expected Sunday through Tuesday morning. Expect temperatures to remain 5-10 degrees below normal this weekend, but by next Tuesday and Wednesday, highs will climb into the 50s in the mountains to the lower 70s across the region. A slight cooling trend may develop late next week. A cutoff low may bring gusty winds and light precipitation to the Sierras and deserts next Saturday and Sunday.
